The Lexington Lions Club Patriots Day Road Race is one of the oldest, continuous road races in the U.S. It was originally called the "Paul Revere Marathon." During the inaugural running in 1914, there were 10 contestants.

Lexington Marathon.

With a sprint, timed just right, that used up his last ounce of energy, "Curly" Currier won the first road race of the L. A. A., last Monday, covering the three and one-half mile course in 18 minutes and 10 seconds. The Page brothers, — Carl and Vernon, — took the second and third prizes, finishing strong, only a few yards behind Currier, and Joseph Buckley won the 4th cup, finishing alone a few seconds behind the leaders.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the ten contestants were started from the Town Hall, accompanied by a patrol of Boy Scouts on wheels, while over a thousand spectators double-quickened to the Playground to witness the finish. The first report at the one mile mark showed the four leaders bunched, with a second division of the younger runners sticking together a short distance behind. The order in turning Five Forks was never announced, for scarcely had the courier arrived when three runners appeared on Lincoln street, surrounded by bicycles and autos. It was a pretty sight, as for the last half mile they ran abreast, stride for stride, until Currier's sprint 100 yards from the finish gave him the race.

Buckley had been seized with cramps on the State road and dropped out, but recovering again took up the grid and passed all but the first three. The fight for 5th place was a duplicate of the one for first, Bartlett, Day and Haynes coming up to the finish in a bunch, the sprint separating them by a few yards in the order named. Mader, Ferry and Hadley all finished the course in the order named.

The efficiency of the Boy Scouts was well illustrated by an incident within sight of the finish. A runner, exhausted, had scarcely reached the fence to support himself, before a Scout from the patrol, bringing up the rear, had covered him with a blanket and by a dash of water in the face, revived him sufficiently to permit him to complete the course. The race more than justified the L. A. A. in inaugurating it and will surely be made a feature of our next 10th.
